Ter Vell - Pietera itinerary

Leaving the tourist office in Estartit and heading south on the promenade, you can reach the Ter Vell. There is an observatory that can be visited, near La Sirena camp, or you can go for a walk between the beach and the lagoons to the mouth of the Ter Vell. At the end on the Ter Vell beach, we turn to the right and on 400 meters we find the lifted observatory made of wood, from where the lagoon fauna can be observed. We walk 400 metres farther from there, between hedges to the west, driving us away from the beach until we arrive to the road that leads to Estartit. Turn right heading north and a few meters away there is a crossing on the left, which leads to the closa d'en Mascort and the closa del Mas d'en Bou. It is necessary to return back to the highway and head toward the treatment plant, a few meters to the right, in order to take the road heading east, which leads to the route returning to the observatory. To continue the route, take the path that starts off in south direction from the observatory, between folds, to the Pietera housing development.

Basses d'en Coll itinerary

From the Tourist Information Office, we have two options. First option is to take the marked itinerary that leads to the Basses d'en Coll viewpoint, from where we can get an overview of the area. Along the way there are paddies, which remain flooded in summer and dry in winter. Once in the viewpoint, you can walk, parallel to irrigation channel, from Coll until a bridge that allows the crossing to the right side, besides the Barraca d'en Quaranta, and continues among other rice fields. At the end of the path another bridge can be found, above the Molí de Pals irrigation channel, which allows us to link to the Gola del Ter -Pals Beach itinerary.

The other option is, from the Tourist Information Office, take the road heading to the beach. Once there and along the coast, we find to the right the dunes in Pals Beach, the best preserved of our coast.

Gola del Ter - Platja de Pals itinerary

From the road to the Mas Pinell housing development, take a marked path to the north towards the Gola del Ter. The path runs among the Puig de la Fonolera to the right, with typical vegetation of Mediterranean forests, and a border less high to the left, where the bank forest predominates. If you leave the route and follow the road of the urbanization, you reach the bank forest that borders the Daró river until its mouth. To continue the itinerary it is necessary to return back to take the marked path heading the Gola del Ter. Beyond the Puig de la Fonolera and once bordered the Delfín Verde camp, the path runs for a large space with very characteristic vegetation of the coast, alternating fixed dunes, marsh zones and reed beds.
